Provide Options for Recruiting Interest

Optimize individual choice and autonomy Examples: Provide learners with as much discretion and autonomy as possible by providing choices in such things as: the level of perceived challenge, type of rewards or recognition available; context or content used for practicing and assessing skills; tools used for information gathering or production; color, design, or graphics of layouts; and the sequence or timing for completion of tasks.

The following websites offer students choice in regards to topic, layout, customization, and choice to encourage engagement and interest in subject matter.

Notes:

Provide Options for Sustaining Effort and Persistence

Heighten salience of goals and objectives Examples: Prompt or require learners to explicitly formulate or restate goal; display the goal in multiple ways; and demonstrate the use of hand-held or computer-based scheduling tools.

The following websites offer ideas and tools for creating rubrics that will make goals and objectives meaningful to students.

Notes:

Develop self-assessment and reflection Examples: Offer devices, aids, or charts to assist individuals in learning to collect, chart and display data from their own behavior for the purpose of monitoring changes in those behaviors; use activities that include a means by which learners get feedback and have access to alternative scaffolds (charts, templates, feedback displays) that support understanding progress in a manner that is understandable and timely.

This websites show how to help students to become self-advocates - an effective way to develop their self-assessment skills.
